

索書號：HB72/M886

登錄號：E0013604

介購單位：圖書館

書名：Cents and sensibility - what economics can learn from the humanities

作者：Gary Saul Morson , Morton Schapiro

內容簡介：Cents and Sensibility demonstrates the benefits of a freewheeling dialogue between economics and the humanities by addressing a wide range of problems drawn from the economics of higher education, the economics of the family, and the development of poor nations. It offers new insights about everything from the manipulation of college rankings to why some countries grow faster than others. At the same time, the book shows how looking at real-world problems can revitalize the study of literature itself.

目錄：

Chapter 1 Spotting the spoof

Chapter 2 A show walk to judgment

Chapter 3 The power and limits of the economic approach

Chapter 4 Love is in the air... or at least in the error term

Chapter 5 The ultimate question

Chapter 6 The best of the humanities

Chapter 7 De-hedgehogizing

Chapter 8 Humanomics